

ENGLAND HAS ITS TROUBLES

People Demand That The English Flag Be Protected By Land And Sea—Rushing Work

WARSHIPS ARE MAKING READY NOW

Germany Much Excited—Even France Is Stirred Up—May Mean A Great International War For Europe.

(Special To The Gazette.)
Paris, July 21.—France fears it is to be war and is getting ready to take her part in it. Rush orders have been sent to all arsenals and shipyards to push work with vigor and dispatch, working night and day to put the French navy in the best possible fighting trim.

Officers and men of the Mediterranean and Atlantic divisions, who have been on leave of absence have been ordered to report to their respective ships without delay, and every fighting ship in the French navy will be put on a war footing with the least possible delay and ordered to join either the Mediterranean or Atlantic squadrons, which will be first called upon to fight if there is fighting to be done.

The French naval forces in European waters will be under command of Vice Admiral Edouard Pottier, in command of the Mediterranean squadron, and Vice Admiral, the Marquis de Courville, commander of the Atlantic squadron, in case of war. Admiral Pottier is one of the ablest men in the French navy. He is now sixty-four years of age, but is as alert and robust as a man of fifty. Besides his long sea service, he has had much diplomatic experience. He commanded the French contingent during the outbreak in Crete, and at one time, in his capacity as senior flag officer, commanded the combined naval forces of the four powers.

Admiral de Courville is of an old Breton family which has furnished the French navy with many of its finest officers. He has had much experience abroad and can be depended upon to uphold the dignity and honor of the French navy.

Some of the younger and more enthusiastic of the French naval officers are anxious for war to come. France has paid particular attention to submarine naval warfare. Her flotilla of submarines is the largest and finest in the world.

In the French home squadrons, both in the channel and Mediterranean, are some of the finest battle-ships and cruisers ever built. They are manned by the flower of the French navy, and there is no mistaking the fact that in naval circles a war even with Great Britain is not feared.

If the navy would rather live to see war, the feeling is not shared by the responsible men in the government. They do not want war.

May Save Russia
London, July 21.—The friendly relations between Great Britain and the other powers, save Russia alone, are likely to have an important bearing on the present crisis and may do much to avert war. Since King Edward's accession to the throne, the entire energy of his majesty has been devoted to bringing about a rapprochement between England and her neighbors. The signature of the arbitration treaty with France and the interchange of visits between the king and President Loubet have brought England and France more closely together than they ever have been.

The same is true of the relations with Germany. The diplomacy of his majesty has drawn the bonds between the countries much closer, and a treaty between Germany and Great Britain looking to arbitration also has been signed. Our relations with the United States also have been greatly improved, and the friendliness between the two countries has grown and ripened.

As a result of all this a concert of the powers to prevent Russia plunging Europe into war for the purpose of saving her in her war with Japan is much more within the bounds of reason than it would have been a few years ago. With Germany and France exerting pressure on Russia and the United States making it understood that she holds Great Britain's contention to be right there is hope that the crisis may pass and the war clouds disappear.

England Prepares for War
London, July 21.—British public feeling is dangerously near the war point, and the pressure over the seizure of the Malacca by the Russians may be so great on the government as to compel it to take action that would inevitably mean war. Party lines have been for the time obliterated in the feeling against Russia and much bitter language is indulged in. The newspapers, with hardly an exception advocate radical action for the preservation of British dignity and the protection of the British shipping.

The news that the Malacca had been held up by the Suez canal authorities caused a thrill of pleasure throughout London, and a later report, which was not confirmed, that she had been taken by the British cruisers, her crew restored to duty, and her Russian prize crew made prisoners, started the crowds shouting.

Rush War Preparations
Every government shipyard in England has been ordered to work day and night in order to rush to completion repairs under way. The ordnance and commissary forces are also working twenty-four hours a day to get every fighting craft in commission to the highest state of efficiency. The naval reserves have not yet been ordered to report to the colors, but they have been notified to hold themselves in readiness. There has been much activity also in the transport department and owners of subsidiary craft have been notified that the government might need certain vessels at a moment's notice. In fact, if war actually was at hand the government could not show more activity.

Must Let American Ships Alone
Washington, D. C., July 21.—Russia's seizure of German and British vessels occupies the attention of the state department to the practical exclusion of other business, because it is probable, if Russia is not checked, that the question may be brought home to the United States in its commerce between San Francisco and Japan. The state department came yesterday to a definite conclusion on one phase of the question, namely, that if Russia should seize any American mail or mail-carrying ship, the United States would make an immediate protest to Russia. The authorities here are secretly of the opinion that Turkey is playing into the hands of Russia, and that fact alone, independent of the seizure of vessels, gives Great Britain grounds for her protest to Russia, or even taking up arms on behalf of her ally, Japan.

German Blood Boils
Berlin, July 21.—News of the seizure of the Hamburg-American liner Sambia in the Red sea by Russian cruisers has increased the bitter feeling against the Russians caused by the holding up of the Prinz Heinrich, and the government is being urged to take strong measures to put a stop to the business. The Kaiser is said to be angry and is quoted as having declared with emphasis that interference with German shipping will not be tolerated. Just what steps will be taken to protect German shipping is not known, but that they will be ample may be taken for granted.

So far as I have been able to learn there is no special effort being made to put either the army or navy on a war footing. Germany is bound to neither of the combatants by treaty or private understanding, and does not propose to burn her fingers pulling anybody's chestnuts out of the fire but her own.

Plan to Divide England's Domain
Constantinople, July 21.—Russia is trying to negotiate with Turkey for permission for her Black sea fleet to pass the Dardanelles, but there is little likelihood of her efforts meeting with success for the present at least. It is said that Russia has offered to give Turkey a free hand in dealing with her Macedonian subjects as the price of her compliance, and it is hinted that the suggestion has been made to the Porte that in case the passage of her war vessels into the Mediterranean resulted in war with England that a Russo-Turkish alliance would be at once formed, and in event of victory Turkey's nominal sovereignty over Egypt would be made real and others of Great Britain's Asiatic possessions would fall to the spoils. If Turkey could see a reasonable assurance of victory, and could feel confident of Russia's acting in good faith after she had won what she wanted it is altogether probable that the deal would go through.

Steamer Retaken
London, July 21.—The authorities at Port Said have retaken the steamship Malacca, seized by the Russians in the Red sea. The vessel, with the Russian crew aboard, is held to await the instructions of the British government. Two British cruisers halted the Malacca at Port Said, according to a stock exchange report. If this is true her detention must have been forcible, and color is lent to this by the action of the Russian officer in charge of the vessel and earlier reports regarding the passengers and crew.

The following dispatch was sent out yesterday and is the one referred to above:
Port Said, July 21.—The crew and passengers of the Peninsular & Oriental steamer Malacca, seized by the Russian volunteer fleet steamer St. Petersburg in the Red sea, have been landed here. The ship is detained by the authorities, who are waiting instructions before taking further action.

Before the captain and crew were landed they were held prisoners and

STATE RECORDS ARE REFUSED NOW

Secretary of State Will Not Allow a Private Citizen The Right to View Them.

(Special To The Gazette.)
Madison, Wis., July 21.—Secretary of State W. L. House has refused permission to Emil A. Hartman, as the representative of Theodore Goldin, chairman of the republican state central committee, to examine the expense vouchers of the deputy game wardens and deputy oil inspectors for the last two months. Secretary House said that he would not recognize the existence of the state central committee by granting the request of its agent.

Later Mr. Hartman in his capacity of a private citizen of the state, made a written request for permission to examine the vouchers, and the secretary said that he would take it under consideration for a few days. Mr. Hartman says he takes that to mean that his request will not be granted. Secretary House says that under the law only the governor and legislative committees have authority to examine records in his office. Other persons are permitted to do so only through courtesy, the secretary said.

LEAVES CHURCH IN THE LURCH

Madison Pastor Starts a Church Building—When Half Completed, He Leaves For Another Church.

(Special To The Gazette.)
Madison, Wis., July 21.—Members of the Pillgrim Congregational church of this city are greatly exercised over the recent resignation of their pastor, Rev. C. C. Campbell. For several years past he advocated the erection of a new church and at a business meeting of the congregation last winter he was successful in his efforts. A number of the members, however, strenuously objected to the building of a new house of worship. Mr. Campbell promised to shoulder all responsibility and collect the funds for the new building. When he began to canvass he was soon apprised of the fact that he could not get sufficient funds. Work on the new church has already been started and the resignation of Mr. Campbell at this time left the members in unfortunate circumstances. He accepted a call from the Plymouth Congregational church in St. Paul and will assume his new duties August 1.

WEEDS WERE THE CAUSE OF PERMIT

Farmer Seeks Court Aid to Help Him Harvest His Crops in Iowa.

(Special To The Gazette.)
Madison, Wis., July 21.—Special dispensation to weed was granted yesterday by Judge Donovan of this city to Charles Atwood, a farmer of the village of Eden, Iowa county, and Miss Julia Garrison of Little Rock, Nobles county, Minnesota. The groom received from Dane County Clerk Goff July 18th a license to wed, after a wait of five days required by law. The application for mail for the license was made on the 15th but a delay in the mail prevented its issuance until last Monday. The reason for the wedding taking place in Madison was the prolonged visit of the bride with relatives and friends in the city. But weeds were growing fast on the Iowa county farm and the thrifty groom had no desire to wait until Saturday for a pronouncement of the words that would make him an independent man and wife. Yesterday the lovely couple applied to Judge Donovan to help them out of their difficulties.

STRIKERS GO BACK TO WORK

Many Do Not Wait For The General Order To Return But Report At Yards This Morning

STRIKE BREAKERS ARE LEAVING

Great Ratification Of The Union Leaders Will Be Held This Evening—Eleven Cities Agree To Terms.

(Special by Scripps-McLear.)
Chicago, Ill., July 20.—Blatant over the partial victory achieved yesterday in the granting by packers of the demand for a plan of arbitration which assures the return of the strikers and an adjustment of all difficulties, the striking butcher workers are today preparing for the ratification of the leaders. A meeting will be held tonight for this purpose. President Donnelly has already received telegrams from a majority of the members of the executive board of the union stationed in eleven cities, ratifying the peace terms. Others will be heard from today. A unanimous result is expected. Some strikers are reported at work this morning not waiting for the day when all are to return in a body. Special efforts are being made by officials of the union to preserve order while the peace plans are being considered. The strike breakers are quitting and considerable numbers being paid off.

Go Back to Work
Kansas City, Mo., July 21.—Several hundred strikers took their old places this morning, not waiting for the order to return in a body. They worked side by side with the strike-breakers.

End of Strike in Stockyards
Chicago, July 21.—A settlement of the packing house strike, involving nine meat distributing centers, was effected in Chicago shortly before 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, and most of the butchers returned to work Thursday morning.

By the terms of the agreement, signed by representatives of each side, all disputes pertaining to wages and working conditions will be submitted to a board of arbitration, and pending an adjustment of the controversy the men will receive the same wages that were paid just previous to the strike.

A basis for settlement was obtained after a conference lasting more than three hours, held in the downtown offices of Swift & Co. The question of reinstating the men on strike was the chief matter of dispute, and finally was disposed of by an agreement that the men shall be taken back as fast as possible without discrimination. After forty-five days from the date work is resumed any former employee who has not been taken back will have the privilege of submitting his case to arbitration.

Donnelly Sends Notice.
President Donnelly telegraphed to all members of the executive board of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America telling them of the settlement and asking for a ratification of the agreement.

As soon as the agreement has been ratified by the executive board steps will be taken to select the arbitrators.

KUROKI LEADS ADVANCE ON BASE OF RUSSIANS

Movement Toward Liaoyang Is Marked by the Retreat of Defending Forces With Great Loss.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—It is officially announced that the great Japanese advance from Salimise on Liaoyang began on July 13. After two days' fighting the Russians have retreated to a position twenty-four miles east of Liaoyang.

According to the latest information received, the battle of Motien pass was more serious than at first supposed, the Russians having had at last 30,000 men engaged. Once more victory was won by the Japanese owing to their far superior artillery, which cut the gallant Twenty-fourth regiment to pieces, and in the retreat which reached to Salikien the Russian losses must have been great.

The war office is still without details as to the losses, beyond the fact that they exceeded 1,900.

This last action has brought Kuroki to within twenty miles of Liaoyang, which fact has caused a nervous feeling here that the next move of the Japanese will be to capture the headquarters of the commander-in-chief.

The Official Gazette announces in a special edition two-days' fighting, Monday and Tuesday, owing to Kuroki's advancing in force from Matselung on the Liaoyang road. This looks as though the fears of an attack on Liaoyang will be realized.

The Badger Brass Manufacturing company is to build a large plant in Kenosha for the manufacture of automobile and bicycle lamps.

arbitration. This will be composed of three practical packing house men, one to be chosen by each side and the third to be selected by these two. According to the agreement they will meet within forty-eight hours after the men return to work and will hold daily sessions until their duties have been completed.

The agreement was drawn up by a subcommittee appointed by each side. Thomas E. Wilson of Nelson Morris & Co., Thomas J. Connors of Armour & Co. and Edward Tilden of Libby, McNeill & Libby represented the packers, while President Donnelly, Vice-Presidents Sterling and Flossch of the butcher workmen and Vice-President Thomas I. Kidd of the American Federation of Labor acted for the unions.

Text of the Agreement.
The agreement, as drawn up and signed, is as follows:

"Memorandum of agreement entered into between the representatives of the various packing companies whose signatures appear below and the representatives of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, as follows:

"Wages and working conditions of all employees now on strike to be submitted to arbitration, each party to this agreement having the privilege of bringing before the arbitrators for decision any question of wages or conditions, or any other grievances they may have, and both to abide by the decision of the arbitrators. The packing companies signing this agreement to retain all employees now at work who wish to remain, and will re-employ all employees now out as fast as possible, without discrimination. Employees to return to work at the wages received when going out, pending the decision of the arbitrators; arbitrators to consist of three (3) practical packing house men, to be selected as follows:

Make-Up of the Board.

"One representative of the packing companies, one representative of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America; these two to select a third member. The two first named shall meet within forty-eight hours after resumption of work, proceed to elect the third member, and shall meet daily for that purpose until this duty has been completed. When the third member has been selected the three shall meet daily unless adjournment be had by unanimous consent, until the final conclusion has been reached and the award made. Any former employee not re-employed within the forty-five days from date work is resumed to have the privilege of submitting his or her case to arbitration, on question of discrimination, decision of arbitrators to govern."

BOYS' OLD HAUNTS ARE DESERTED NOW

Most of The Youngsters Are Spending The Summer Days in Best Fields—Pay-Day Yesterday.

Yesterday was pay day for the small boys employed in the beet fields and there was a large crowd of them at the office of the Wisconsin Sugar Co. where the settlements are made, last evening. The beet fields have kept a large number of boys employed and out of mischief this summer. Their absence on the streets and along the river banks is noticeable. They are taken in wagons to their work early in the morning, long before most citizens are stirring on the streets, and brought back at night, tired and hungry but conscious that the day has been well spent.

HIKE FOR THE PIKE TUESDAY

Watchword of The Citizens For The Great And Only Exhibition Ever Shown in Janesville.

On every side the phrase "Hike for the Pike" can be heard. Even the newspapers throughout the state have taken the cause of the great and glorious "Hike for the Pike" to be given next Tuesday afternoon and evening. Mysterious bundles are arriving each day from Chicago and New York and more mysterious personages are to be seen on the streets making inquiries for this manager or that manager of the different exhibitions. The latest arrivals were the freaks for the Hilly Moral side show, who made a mistake in the date and thought the exhibit was this week instead of next. This party of world celebrities consists of Madame Glimmeret, an Italian snake charmer; Sopranamita, a dwarf; Hessian Ali, an Egyptian giant; Caticowagawa, a Sulu cannibal chief; Spikrino, the three-legged man; Madame Dacoma, the lady bag puncher; Madame Gagevski, the bearded lady, and Sig. Stiff, the ossified man. Aside from these attractions this show will have the famous Hungarian orchestra from Hungary.

M. Pierrette, the high diver, has been in the city for several days making tests of the stability of the tower and the tank which he will use. This daring feat will take place at eight o'clock in the evening and will be absolutely true to all. Word has been received from the Russian consul in Chicago that sixteen of a crew of a Russian warship have left New York and will arrive in Janesville on Monday night to form the crew of the Russian battleship which will be sunk by Admiral Togo. It is also understood that Mrs. Togo will accompany her husband, and will be the guest of the golf club during her stay in Janesville. She will hold a reception on the golf club porch immediately after the sinking of the battleship.

The German village, the Japanese tea garden, the Turkish palace and the moving picture show are already on the way. Under and Over the Sea and the great loop the loop will be in place when the first visitors arrive Tuesday. The boss chandler man of the company has arrived and is making his arrangements for lighting the grounds. The entertainment will certainly be a Pike and those who do not go will be "Pikers."

WEATHER BUREAU MAKES REPORTS

SHOWS CONDITIONS OF CROPS IN THE STATE

EVERYTHING IS DOING WELL

No Let Up In The Reports of Heavy Crops And Excellent Conditions.

The week has been generally favorable for the growth and maturity of crops, as well as for gathering of those already matured. There was very little rain in the state as a whole, although some heavy local showers occurred in some of the northeastern counties. In a few instances these storms were accompanied with high winds and hail, causing some damage in limited areas. The temperature was reasonable until near the end of the week, when a depression of some energy passed eastward over Lake Superior, causing strong southerly winds over the entire state accompanied with temperatures ranging from 90 to 100 degrees. This condition was followed by local thunderstorms Sunday, with slightly cooler weather Sunday night, but high temperatures again occurred Monday. As a rule the soil is well supplied with moisture, although there are a few localities where rain is needed.

Winter Wheat and Rye: Winter wheat is generally matured in the southern and central counties and is ripening rapidly in the northern section. Rye is nearing maturity and in some sections is being harvested. A good yield is anticipated.

Spring Grains: Spring wheat and rye have made excellent progress. Oats are heading out. The stand is good but the straw generally short. Barley is beginning to turn and early sown will be ready for harvesting in about two weeks. The present condition of oats and barley gives promise of good yields.

Corn: The high temperature during the week, especially at night, caused corn to improve rapidly. The crop is, however, about ten days or two weeks behind the average condition at this date. The fields are generally clean and the plants healthy and vigorous.

Potatoes: The weather during the week was generally favorable for tobacco and the present condition of the crop is satisfactory.

Pastures: Pastures have made rapid advancement during the past week. Bugs are reported unusually numerous.

Hay: The dry weather was very favorable for haymaking, and a large amount was secured in good condition. The crop, while not heavy, is good and the quality excellent.

Minor Crops: Sugar beets are maturing rapidly. The fields are clear of weeds and the crop in most localities has received the last working for the season. Gardens are doing well.

Fruit: Raspberries are ripening, and while the crop is not large, the quality is excellent. Cherries are about maturing; a light crop. Apple trees in some localities are suffering from blight, but generally a fair crop seems assured.

Current conditions indicate a cranberry crop approximately equal to that of last year, or about one-third below normal. Reserve ponds amply supplied for protection against frost.

Extracts from Correspondents' Reports.

GREAT INDUSTRY GROWN RAPIDLY

Janesville Machine Company Has Been Doing a Hustling Business Late Years.

Janesville has within its midst several large manufacturing plants of which the Janesville Machine Company is numbered among its foremost industries. This company established its factory one block on the east side of South River street. The machine shops of this company established its factory in 1859 and since then it has made rapid strides in the way of enlarging and rebuilding their present plant until today the company occupies two blocks square on Franklin street and one block on the east side of South Franklin street. The machine shops, carpenter shops, foundry, paint shops and moulding rooms of the company are the finest to be found in any plant of its kind in the United States. The company make a specialty of plows, cultivators and farm machines, and have established an enviable reputation for their goods throughout the United States and Europe, where they always find a ready sale. The Janesville Machine company employs in the neighborhood of two hundred and fifty men the year round and pay their help the highest wages demanded for this class of labor. The business of the company this year has been excellent and many goods have been shipped to Europe and foreign countries during the past twelve months. The work of building their machines for next season has already commenced and a large supply of machines are always kept on hand to supply the ever increasing demand for this class of farm machinery of which this company have no superiors in the country today.

CARPENTERS ARE NEEDED BADLY

Many Buildings That Are in Process of Construction in Beloit Need Workmen.

There is a good deal of demand for carpenters in Beloit, and the several contractors could employ a number more good men all the season at top wages. There is a good deal more building going on in the Lino city than is generally supposed, and it looks now as though the work will continue throughout the season. With the college library, the Berlin works enlargement, new churches, the big office of the Fairbanks-Morse Mfg. Co., and the other work completed or under way, the volume of money spent this year for building will be swelled into a sum that may equal any ever known in Beloit for a year.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Thursday, July 21, 1861.—The Draft.—Editor Gazette: How to raise our quota of men under the 500,000 call and avoid the draft:

Take all the names on the present enrollment for any one town or ward, and put them into the wheel; then draw out all the names singly until they are all drawn out, divide them off into squads, having the number of squads equal to the number of men to be raised by such town or ward. Now each squad is to become a vigilance committee, whose duty it is to produce one volunteer, either from their own number, or in any other proper way. The volunteer so produced to receive first the government bounty; second, all contributions made by individuals of the squad furnishing the man; third, such additional bounty as the influence of the squad can raise by donations from friends, who are outside of the draft. In this way, it seems to me, a united and persistent effort of all subjects of draft, will result in any town or ward in raising its quota, and thereby obviate the necessity of a draft.—Q. Y.

The Concert of Madame Anne Bishop.—It will be remembered by our citizens that the concert of this noble songstress and her accomplished daughter takes place at the Lapham's hall this evening. They have just returned from a highly successful tour up the Mississippi, and to the westward and are giving their farewell entertainments. Previous to their departure for Europe, in order that all may have an opportunity of hearing these renowned vocalists it has been decided to put the tickets in the gallery at 25 cents.

Soldiers To the Front.—Co. E, 381 Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, numbering twenty-eight men, under the command of Captain Ferris, passed through this city yesterday afternoon on their way to join their regiment at the front. They were noble looking fellows and seemed anxious for a drive at Jeff's friends.

Beloit and the 5000.00.—We learn that Beloit votes next Tuesday on the proposition to raise by tax $18,000 to pay bounties to volunteers. Mr. J. W. Gorey, a war democrat of that place, and a man of property, not only consents to the tax, but also agrees to pay into the fund as much more as his tax in the way of private subscription. So we are informed by a gentleman from that city.

Prompt, Easy Recovery.

The greatest thing in the world—A Mother's Love; the love she lavishes on her children; the love her child should have for her; without this love she could not endure the agonies incident to childbirth; appreciative of this love, Mother's Friend was devised to lessen the pain and anguish of childbirth, that her love might not be strained to the breaking point. Mother's Friend does all this and more—it enables the fond mother to speedily recuperate from the labors of maternity, enables her to regain her lost strength, preserves her youthful lines of beauty, and makes pregnancy her crowning joy without any thorns to mar it.

Mother's Friend

is applied externally, is most harmless in its consistency, most happy in its results, and is of such merit that no case of labor should be conducted without it. It is a liniment for massage of the abdominal muscles during pregnancy, and by its use their tonicity and power of contraction is greatly enhanced, enabling them to sustain the great strain brought to bear on them at this time. It is Mother's Friend. The name should be enough to recommend it to all who expect to be mothers.

VERDICT OF THE PARTY

From the report of the Committee on Credentials to the REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION, which was unanimously adopted by that convention, June 23, 1904.

Your committee report it to be their final judgment that the convention which elected said John C. Spooner, J. V. Quaries, J. W. Babcock and E. M. Boush as delegates at large, and their alternates at large, to this convention from the state of Wisconsin WAS THE REGULAR CONVENTION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN WISCONSIN, and that the delegates elected by it are the regular elected delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin to the republican convention, and, as such, are entitled to seats in this convention.

THE PARKER CHRONOLOGY.

In 1896 and 1900 Judge Parker voted for Bryan and Free Silver. The democratic state convention held at Albany, N. Y., on April 18, 1904, instructed the New York delegation to support Judge Parker's candidacy for the presidency. It adopted unanimously a platform which contained ten planks, including a demand for "reasonable revision of the tariff."

On the question of the gold standard it was silent. The platform had Judge Parker's approval in advance. For two months and twenty days, the candidate stood on that platform and said nothing, while his friends hunted for delegates.

On the morning of Friday, July 8, the resolutions committee of the democratic national convention agreed unanimously, after a sixteen hours' wrangle, on a platform which omitted all reference to the gold standard. Dispatches received at Esopus during the day and evening contained this information and brought the news that the convention had adopted the platform as reported from the committee.

Judge Parker remained silent. Judge Parker was nominated on the morning of Saturday, July 9. Martin W. Littleton, in presenting his name to the convention, referred to him as a man whose policy "will be that policy which finds expression in the platform of his party."

Norman E. Mack, the New York member of the democratic national committee and one of Judge Parker's supporters at St. Louis, made a statement over his own signature on Friday morning after the nomination, as follows:

"The real simple truth of the failure to put a gold plank in the platform is this: It would have resulted in a minority report being presented to the convention, and if that had been done we would have been beaten and Judge Parker would not have been nominated."

On Saturday morning, July 9, the three leading Eastern democratic newspapers, the New York Times, the New York World, and the New York Sun, contained editorials fiercely denouncing the cowardice of the convention, demanding that the candidate should make known his position in regard to the gold standard, predicting Parker's defeat, unless this was done, and threatening to bolt the ticket.

After reading these editorials

Judge Parker, according to a statement given out at Esopus, sent the dispatch to Mr. Sheehan. It was then too late for the convention to name any other candidate.

Four years ago at the Kansas City convention when Mr. Bryan was the candidate for nomination, the resolutions committee was sharply divided upon the question of excluding the money plank. "Instead of waiting until after the platform had been adopted and the nomination of himself had been made," says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican (Ind.), "Mr. Bryan promptly sent word to the convention before any action whatever had been taken, that he must not be considered a candidate for the nomination in case the money question were ignored in the resolution. That was straightforward and it was dealing fairly with all wings and branches of the democratic party."

"It is a manly thing," said Mr. Bryan in his speech at St. Louis, after the reading of Judge Parker's dispatch, "for a man to express his opinion before the convention adjourns. It would have been manly to have expressed it before the convention met."

"There was a deficit of $38,047,247 during the first year of the Dingley tariff," shouts a democratic organ. That's true, but since the Dingley schedules went into effect the country has paid the expenses of a war with Spain and produced a surplus of $125,000,000, exclusive of the $50,000,000 paid for the Panama canal franchise. It is never safe for a democrat to quote figures.

The democratic platform demands that the army be reduced to "a point historically demonstrated to be safe and sufficient." The army has already been reduced from 100,000 to 40,000, the democratic demand can be safely assigned to the pigeon hole labeled "specious flubdubbery."

Bryan predicted that a campaign with Parker as the candidate would "begin with a foot race and end with a rout." The country feels the same way and refuses to be alarmed over prospects of a change of administration.

The census bureau reports that there are 5,000 plains in the farm houses of one county in Kansas. In democratic times the census takers find mortgages instead of pianos in the farm houses of the nation.

Mr. John R. McClean predicts a great democratic victory this year. Mr. McClean will be remembered as the man who received the smallest vote ever recorded for a democratic candidate for governor in Ohio.

"Mr. Cortelyou has done nothing in his life for which he has to apologize," says one of his biographers. That finally disposes of the charge that he ever voted the democratic ticket.

"I have every confidence in the democratic party," declares Judge Parker. The judge is apparently determined to emphasize the fact that he is different from most people.

"Time will vindicate me," says Mr. Bryan. It will, to the extent that the candidate nominated at St. Louis will be beaten as thoroughly as Mr. Bryan was in 1896 and 1900.

Democratic managers are preparing to flood the country with campaign orators, but the people never have a very warm welcome for the advance agents of adversity.

The democratic party occupies much the same position as the man who has sold his body to the physicians for experimental purposes.

After November 8, Judge Parker will know how to sympathize with the player who gets his base on balls and then stands and watches his supporters strike out.

The physicians in attendance report that the democratic patient, instead of regaining sanity, has suffered a relapse.

Judge Parker is reported to be very fond of athletics. It is not too soon for him to begin practicing with the parachute.

Every time the democratic party is faced with its record on a living issue it pleads the statute of limitations.

"Coin" Harvey's financial school will remain closed as long as the republicans are in power.

PRESS COMMENT.

Chicago News: How can Grandpa Davis know how much he means to give to the campaign fund until the campaign managers tell him?

Green Bay Gazette: The cat barons are favored by fortune and the weather man. Even the thought of a steak or a roast is unbearable these hot days.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The Milwaukee Free Press has decided the La Follette case in advance, and seems to think there is nothing left for the supreme court to do but affirm the decision.

Chicago Chronicle: Noth that Arthur P. Gorman says that the democratic ticket "should be" successful. Being perceptibly "foxy" himself, the gentleman from Maryland makes no rash claims—and gives no assurances.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: The Atlanta Constitution asserts that Judge Parker "cut the Garden knot" at St. Louis. Also the ambience between himself and the Western democrats.

El Paso Herald: The paronymastic Rio Grande Roarer alleges that these Dublin disturbances are due to Pat's impression that Pat's rioting is patriotic.

Laramie Boomerang: Politics makes strange bedfellows. A Kansas delegate awakened the other morning after a party caucus and beheld a boarconstrictor and a purple hippopotamus playing plugging on his coverlets.

St. Louis Post Dispatch: The man who was standing on the street and had no time to get out of the way when the police officer began shooting at the fugitive has himself to blame for his fractured kneecap. The streets, belong to policemen and fugitives.

Philadelphia Press: The college graduates who have learned to hustle and to stand on their own feet will find room and a welcome where the scholarships are not admitted.

Milwaukee Sentinel: The stories about the withdrawal from the field of the republican state ticket will continue to appear at regular intervals until election time, after which preparations for inaugurating S. A. Cook as governor will begin.

Chicago Record-Herald: Kuropatkin is publishing a tri-weekly paper at his headquarters and edits it himself. This may account for his poor showing against the Japs. No man can be a good editor and have time to do much else.

Chicago Inter Ocean: Democratic campaign hand books bear the titles: "The Tariff," "Unstable Roosevelt," "The Issues," etc. But where are "Musings on the Platform," by W. J. B., and "The Supplied but Unofficial Plank," by A. B. P.?

Grant County Witness: Two years ago many democrats voted for La Follette, first because they didn't like Rose, and second, because they had no hopes of electing their ticket. The situation is different this year. With Peck, Burr Jones or Neal Brown at the head of their ticket and this being a presidential year, they seem to think they have more than a fighting chance to land their man—and they are going to stick to party lines very closely. There will be but little straddling this year.

Pond du au Commonwealth: The opposition press should "get together." One day it will charge that the republicans are securing lavish contributions from the corporations, for campaign purposes, and the next day it is out with a statement that the trusts and the moneyed interests are afraid of Roosevelt and that Chairman Cortelyou will have all sorts of trouble in finding sufficient funds to run the campaign on this year.

Madison Democrat: It is estimated that Hearst's yellow kid campaign cost the gilded parvenue at least $3,000,000. As he received only 200 votes in the convention, it thus becomes apparent that they "stood him in" at the rate of about $15,000 each. And yet all the bills are not settled. One of his Milwaukee managers has brought suit for $1,500, and another for some $300. When the numerous claims are finally adjusted it may be found that the rate has risen materially, possibly to $200,000 a head. Hearst objects to the mysterious "incidentals," which seem to be the basis of most of the charge; and, really, there is some reason for sensitiveness on that point since he himself was only the merest incident in the attempted purchase of the presidency.

Whitewater Register: Another deplorable result of official neglect is the epidemic of typhoid fever now raging at the state hospital for the insane at Mendota. Dr. Salom Marks of Milwaukee states on information and belief, that when the first indications of the fatal pollution appeared, the superintendent was absent doing political work in his own country, and has been for three years, that the Mendota asylum is a haven of rest and reward for petty political workers. And it is not strange that they are not only unfettered for their duties but that they also feel justified in grossly neglecting them. The chronic absenteeism of the head of the administration from the work which he is paid $5,000 a year to attend to—and which is especially emphasized at this time when his organs advertise that he is going to harrow the state with an automobile the next four months—set an example to his appointees—which they are not slow to take advantage of.

WOODSTOCK CROOKS IN CITY YESTERDAY

Burglars, Who Got Away With $200, Were Seen on Streets—Too Late When Descriptions Came.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the sheriff and city marshal of Woodstock arrived here from Madison whither they had gone in quest of two burglars who had broken into a house and gotten away with $200 on the previous evening. Men answering to the descriptions given had been seen on the streets of Janesville by Acting Marshal Brown and his assistants yesterday morning and might easily have been arrested had the officers been apprised of the robbery. No trace of them could be found last night. It is believed that they scented trouble and beat a hasty retreat.

BOLD THEFT BY YOUNG GIRLS

SATCHEL RIFLED IN NORTHWEST
TEEN DEPOT WAITING ROOM

WHILE OWNER WAS ABSENT

Carrie Minard And Hattie Fellows
Carried Away Wearing Apparel
Under Their Skirts.

Carrie Minard and Hattie Fellows, two fifteen year old girls of rather prepossessing appearance, spent the night in the city lock-up as a result of a bold theft committed in the North-Western passenger depot shortly before six o'clock last evening. A lady from Madison whose name had not been learned at noon today was the sole occupant of the women's waiting room. Leaving her satchel on the end of one of the benches she stepped out to walk upon the platform. Upon her return a few moments later the satchel was missing. After a search it was found in the toilet room—open and empty. The railroad officials immediately communicated with the police and Acting Marshal Brown went to the depot to investigate.

Clothes and Money Gone
The lady informed him that she had lost a number of articles of clothing and a ten dollar bill which were in the valise. As they were discussing the matter a young man drove along the roadway between the depot and the Fisher tobacco warehouse and stopped to allow Carrie Minard to get into the buggy. The couple then drove on toward the Fellows home.

Carried Under Skirts
About seven o'clock Officer Brown was informed by Edward Welch, driver of the Grand hotel bus, that about the time the satchel had been rifled he had seen the two young women in question leave the depot platform and walk towards the McGiffin warehouse, that they were proceeding with some difficulty, and that the underskirt worn by one of them seemed to be dragging on the ground. Shortly thereafter the two girls again appeared upon the scene in the neighborhood of the depot and they were promptly arrested and taken to the lock-up. Once inside the city hall they broke down and confessed to the theft of the clothing, though they denied finding any money in the satchel. They informed the officers where the clothing was to be found and it was subsequently recovered.

Attitude of Parents
A silk waist, a pair of shoes, a dress, several undershirts and a pair of stockings, aggregating in value about $15 were among the articles taken. When Mrs. Fred Fellows was informed that her daughter was to be brought up in court this afternoon and might be sent to the reform school, she expressed her approval of the idea. She said that the girl was wild and she was not able to control her. Mrs. Fred Briggs, mother of Carrie Minard, did not take the same view of the matter. She is unwell and the girl has been helping support the family, having secured a position in a bakery and agreed to go to work Monday. She was also afraid the girl would go into a state of hysteria and mental collapse when she should be brought into court.

Sentence Is Suspended
In court this afternoon both girls testified amid many sobs that they were fourteen years of age. They admitted the theft of the contents of the satchel, save the money. The court after long deliberation decided to suspend sentence in their cases until August 10. Judge Filbeck gave them a severe lecture in which he assured them that if complaints of misconduct of any kind whatever reached him hereafter they would be sent to the reformatory at Milwaukee to remain there until they should reach the age of twenty-one years.

HERTHA WALVIG TO THE REFORMATORY

Young Girl Acknowledged Forgery of Checks And Was Sentenced to Girls Industrial School.

Hertha Walvig of Beloit, aged sixteen years, was this morning sentenced by Judge Filbeck to the Girls' Industrial school in Milwaukee until she shall be twenty-one years of age. The sentence will probably be greatly shortened if her behavior is exemplary. The girl has acknowledged that she forged several checks drawn on the Rosenblatt overall factory, Rev. Cheney and others, though she still avers that the idea was suggested to her by one Irvin Reese. Vladimir Walvig, a machinist employed in the Berlin Co.'s works and a brother of the girl, told what he knew of the circumstances, as the sister does not understand English well. He did not spare her, though his sorrow over her error was evident. Without hesitation he told the court that she had been educated in the same schools as he had in Christiania, Norway, and must have learned that it was a criminal act to forge another's signature. The family has borne a high reputation in Beloit. The mother broke down when sentence was pronounced and the scene was such an affecting one that the officials hastened to leave the room. The young girl came to this country a year ago last Christmas.

Went up the River: The office force of the Janesville Machine company had a half holiday yesterday afternoon and went up the river to Buchholz park by steamer. Here they had supper and returned to the city in the early evening.

Gave Name to Port Arthur.

MILITARY BOYS HOLD A MEETING

Would Like to Form a Local Militia
Company And Perhaps Enter
The State Guards.

At the G. A. R. hall on the coming Monday evening another meeting to discuss the feasibility of organizing a military company in Janesville, will be held. This was decided upon at the informal discussion held last evening. F. J. Diller, C. C. Madison, and H. N. Lincoln, three veterans of the Spanish war, are interesting themselves in the movement. The first two named have served in the Philippines and the last mentioned was in the hospital corps in Cuba. They hope to interest former members of the Janesville guards and veterans of the last war, particularly. The company would at first be independent of the Wisconsin National guard, with the ultimate purpose to secure membership in the same. In the interim the support of the business men of the city would be needed to make the organization a success. Dept. Commander Pliny Norcross, J. L. Bear, E. G. Harlow and others of the local Grand Army post have interested themselves in the movement.

GREAT RUSH FOR LANDS CONTINUE

Gambler Reaping a Harvest in The Boom Towns of Dakota
Today.

Honesteel, S. D.—The town fathers of Honesteel have gone into the flat joint business themselves. Yesterday the flat joints were put to work with municipal supervision. A policeman was stationed at each game and the agreement was that no bets should exceed the $2 limit. This was done as a complete surrender to the gamblers.
"It was the only way of averting bloodshed," said Mayor Erb. "The way things were going yesterday we realized that killing would occur today if the gamblers were not permitted to work. Most of them are broke and many are desperate."
Things were unusually quiet yesterday, although but forty holidays were reported to have taken place last night. The citizens are still demanding the re-employment of Chief of Police Nelson, not liking the cheap men experiment.

A report that a section of the North-Western had been wrecked and 100 killed caused consternation, but the report was later denied. The rush for the next few days is expected to be unprecedented. It is now anticipated that over 100,000 will be registered.

Chief of Police Ousted
Sioux City, Ia., July 21.—A dispatch from Honesteel, S. D., yesterday afternoon says that the town authorities there have made urgent appeals to both Governor Mealey and the federal government for troops or special officers to protect the town. Last night the town board deposed Chief of Police Nelson and at the same time tried to run off the streets gamblers who had paid for the right to run their tables on the streets. Marshal McDermott tried to run out a three-shill game and was disarmed and assaulted. All last night and yesterday the gamblers were taking stars and clubs from policemen. Robberies and holdups without number have been committed.

LAST SAD RITES ARE PERFORMED

Remains of Mr. And Mrs. Jos. Green
Laid to Rest This Afternoon at Oak Hill Cemetery.

Seldom in this community are the citizens of our city called upon to pay their last tributes of respect to its honored citizens and old residents as they have been called on to do today, in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Green, who met an untimely death at the railroad crossing on Monday last. Loving friends, kind neighbors and citizens in general have done all in their power to comfort the afflicted ones who are left to mourn the loss of a good father and a noble mother, who lived not for this world's goods but for the good of humanity in general. The funeral services were conducted at the late family residence, 109 Madison street this afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. J. T. Henderson, pastor of the Presbyterian church. After the services the caskets were removed to the hearse and the funeral procession, headed by the Masonic order, formed on North Jackson street, then came the W. H. Sargent Post, G. A. R.; followed by Florence Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, who had turned out to pay their last tribute of respect to their departed members. A large number of friends of the bereaved family followed the sad and solemn funeral procession to Oak Hill cemetery, where all that was mortal of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Green were tenderly laid to rest.

The Masonic services at the grave were conducted by Rev. R. W. Bosworth of Beloit. Comrades at the grave who represented the G. A. R. were 1st Comrade E. G. Harlow, 2d Comrade W. J. McIntyre and 3d Comrade A. F. Lee.

We sent a kid over to our baker yesterday with a pound of yeast and a hurry order for 300 extra loaves of bread for the evening trade, as we had forgotten it was Wednesday, and the store would be open. Sometime later the youngster was seen watching the play of a school of carp from the railing of the Court street bridge and sticking yeast on a number of hooks tied to a small clothes line on the end of which was hung a 2-pound brass weight from our tea scales, which has been missing for sometime. With the help of a man who was passing the line, was pulled up with 7 fat carp which weighed 29 pounds. We didn't have any bread to sell last evening, and it was ten o'clock today before we were ready for you again with red hot bread.

CHAPTER I.

THE evidence was all in. The speeches had been made on both sides of the case, and the attorney for the state had grown severe and eloquent in urging conviction. The jury had remained in retirement all the morning and at last had filed in and rendered their verdict. David Buckley, the prisoner at the bar, was found guilty of having deliberately and in the night stolen a bale of cotton from a neighbor's barn, branded it as his own and taken it to market the next day.

He was a short, thickset man near the age of sixty—gray, stiff haired and sullen faced, and just now more angry, it was thought, at certain neighbors who had testified against him than chagrined at the verdict of the court. He glanced at his wife, who sat against the railing behind him, and then stared steadily at the floor till the sheriff came and led him back to jail.

Later in the afternoon he was brought back to receive his sentence. The judge, a tall, powerful man, dark of hair and eye and as brown as a Spaniard, was about to order him to stand up when Hiram Hillyer, a well-to-do cotton and grain merchant of the town, rose and begged permission to speak to the judge in private before the prisoner was sentenced.

"Well, I reckon we've got time, Mr. Hillyer," the judge said pleasantly. "If it's anything in Buckley's favor I'd like to hear it. I've been on the bench seven years, and I don't think I ever had a man before me that was painted as black by his neighbors."

Making his way through the cluster of lawyers and students of the law around the stove to one of the vacant jury rooms, the merchant waited for the judge to join him, and when he came Hillyer, nervously pulling at his short, gray beard, faced him, an eager look in his mild blue eyes.

"I'm afraid it ain't nothing in the old man's favor, Judge Moore," he faltered. "The truth is, I'm a n-thinker about his son. Judge, of that ever was a finer, more honest an upright boy than George Buckley, I hadn't never run across 'im."

"Oh, you can't tell me anything about George," said Judge Moore. "He and I are friends. He voted for me and I've been on the bench for seven years. Ah, so he went you to me, did he? Well, what does George want? I was glad he wasn't in court to hear all that stuff against his daddy."

"You see, we thought—me'n George both thought that maybe you might—justice might be carried out by imposing a pretty heavy fine, an'—"

"Old Buckley ain't able to pay a cent," broke in the judge. "I've made inquiries, and if his little farm is sold it will leave his old wife without any means of making a support. No, the fig's up with him."

"But George's been savin' money for the last five years," said Hillyer anxiously. "I've got it borrowed from 'im at regular rates. I can lay my hands on the money at a moment's notice. Yes, he can raise a reasonable amount all right."

Judge Moore frowned, thrust his hands into the pockets of his trousers and turned to a window which looked out on the courtyard, where a few idlers lay on the grass near the hitching rack.

"I'm not going to be the medium through which deserving innocent people suffer for the guilty," he said firmly. "I've thought it all over. I was afraid George might ask this, but it's no go. I've made up my mind on that score."

"Oh, Judge, don't say that!" pleaded Hillyer. "The boy simply can't bear it. You see, Judge Moore, since I took 'im an' sent 'im off to school he's been sorter away from his home, an' the fellow's got as much feelin' as anybody else. Then when he got through college an' I give 'im a place in my business he's stood with the best folks in the town, an' it would go hard with 'im—to have his own daddy at the coal mines."

"I know all that, Mr. Hillyer. I've thought of it twenty times during this trial. I hardly slept last night trying to make up my mind what to do in case the jury didn't recommend Buckley to mercy. Well, they came down on 'im like a load of bricks, an' I'm not going to let George suffer for him. Why, the old rascal can't be cured of his dishonesty. Didn't you hear what Bradley said about his constantly stealing from his neighbors, many of whom never made any charge against him out of respect for Mrs. Buckley and George? No, sir; his son, who is my friend, shall not sacrifice his savings for him."

"Then I'll pay it, Judge; you know I am able."

"You shan't do that, either," said the judge firmly. "Even if I'd consent to let us old a man as you be out of pocket for such a hopeless reprobate, George would find it out and insist on repaying you in the long run. No; five years in the mines will do the old scamp good, and I'm going to secure his transportation."

"You think that's final then, Judge?" Hillyer had turned quite pale, and the quivering hand which had clutched his beard stung itself in its downward progress.

"Yes, that's final, Mr. Hillyer. I wish I could help you, but I can't. I'll settle Buckley's lash in about twenty minutes after I give him a sound lecture. Right now the old devil would cut the throats of several of the state's witnesses if he was at liberty."

"Then I'll go back to the store an' tell the boy," Hillyer sighed as he moved to the door, a dead look of disappointment in his eye.

As Hillyer was making his way through the courtroom to the outer door the wife of the condemned man reached out her hand and stopped him. She had clutched the tail of his long frock coat.

"I want to speak to you," she said. "Go ahead, I'm goin' outside." He led the way down the stairs to the yard below and then paused to hear what she had to say.

"I seed you invite the judge out," she began. "I suspected you axed 'im to make it a fine."

"Yes, that's what I called 'im out for, Mrs. Buckley," the merchant said, looking down commiserately on her fat figure clothed in dingy black calico, "but it wasn't a bit of use. He's made up his mind to send the old man off for five years."

The woman nodded slowly. "Well, I reckon it's as good as we kin expect," she said. "Ef it had been a fine, George would 'a' laid to pay it, an' I'm agin that proposition. He's worked hard to make his little start, an' it ain't right fer 'im to have to give it up when—Mr. Hillyer, I've heard that pore boy beg an' bes his pa to change, an' ef he's predicted this thing once he has fifty times."

"I knew that, too," replied the merchant, with a dark frown. "But George is just so situated right now, Mrs. Buckley, that he'd sacrifice all he expects to make in the next ten years to avoid the disgrace of the sentence. He holds his own with the biggest folks in town, an' this is simply awful. You know how some of these blue-blooded families look on a thing like this."

"Just about as sensible as they look on most things," retorted Mrs. Buckley philosophically. "an' I don't see no use in humorsin' 'em. They may know a man's a thief, but ef he ain't public they branded them don't care. But David has broke the law; that ain't no change to be made in 'im, an' I'm agin lettin' it hang over George, no matter what these shallow minded aristocrats think. What's botherin' me is another thing."

"You say it is, Mrs. Buckley?" And the merchant stared expectantly.

"Yes, Mr. Hillyer. George ain't got but one weakness, an' that is, once in a long while, when he is in despair, he will take a drink to drown his trouble. I reckon he ain't touched a drop but once since he's been with you."

"An' that was the time they threatened to jail your husband for penitentiary up Wilson's hog, an' we succeeded in squashin' the charge."

"Yes, that was the time—the old woman pushed back her gingham poke bonnet and looked straight into Hillyer's eyes—"an' I am anxious to find out if this thing has made him—"

"Not yet, Mrs. Buckley," Hillyer's voice had fallen very low; it was almost husky. "But I've been to find out if it would start 'im off that I hadn't been able to sleep at night. He's in a awful state of mind, Mrs. Buckley, an' when I go back an' tell 'im the judge's decision I don't know what he'll do. A fine piece of metal will bend just so far an' then it'll break."

The old woman nodded again slowly and then said: "Well, I'll go back inside. This is a new wrinkle on me. It's considered right an' proper fer folks to go to the grave with their kin, an' I reckon that old talk of I shirked hearin' the sentence, but tell George I'll come down to the store after awhile."

"All right, Mrs. Buckley. I'll tell 'im."

As Hillyer turned toward the gate to reach the little street which stretched out, lined with cottages and brick law offices, to the red brick freight depot at the far end, one of the loungers on the grass rose and slouched toward him.

"Have they sentenced Buckley yet?" he asked. "I'm a witness on that barn burnin' case, an' ef it ain't a-goin' to be called tonight I'm a-goin' home."

"It's next on the docket," the merchant informed him.

"The man had another question ready. 'What's cotton bringin' today?' he asked. 'I've got a big white bale ready for the gin.'"

"Seven and three-eighths," answered Hillyer, and he walked on. On the main thoroughfare of the town he had to pass several brick stores where the clerks and merchants stood amid the heaps of their wares on the narrow brick sidewalks, and many of them asked about the Buckley trial. Hillyer made short but considerate replies and hastened past. On a corner of one of the streets running back to a railroad sidetrack, in the rear, stood his warehouse. Here he found his negro porter busy with rattling floor trucks loading a box car with bags of grain. The office was a commodious room cut off in one of the corners of the big brick building next to the street. It contained a long walnut counter full of drawers, with shelves overhead for old ledgers, commercial reports, dusty letter files and wired bundles of bills, receipts and canceled bank checks.

George Buckley, a handsome, dark eyed young man of twenty-seven or eight, sat on a high stool writing in a ponderous ledger. Turning his head and seeing who it was, he removed his hands from the ring of the stool and turned round. There was a steady stare in his eyes as he fixed them on Hillyer's sympathetic, almost startling face.

"You did not succeed," he said, his lips tightening.

"No; he'd already made up his mind, George," replied the merchant.

George Buckley turned suddenly and bent over his ledger and took up his pen, but he did not dip it in the inkstand. Hillyer could not see his face, but he noted that the hand holding the pen was quivering. Suddenly Buckley laid the pen down, and Hillyer heard something resembling a sob or a gasp escape him, then the young man stood down on the floor and reached for his coat and pulled it on. He was deathly pale, his eyes were flashing strangely.

"George, where are you going?" The old man caught his arm, but Buckley wrenched it from his grasp.

"Let me alone, Mr. Hillyer," said he. "For God's sake, let me alone!"

"All right, George; I was just about—But his words fell dead on the air, for Buckley had taken his hat, pulled it on, and plunged out at the door. For a moment the merchant stood like a man turned to stone, and then he hurried back over the rough floor through the warehouse to the negro, a tall, middle aged man.

"Jake," he said excitedly, unable to control his voice, "drop your work an' run after George. Don't let 'im see you, but come back and tell me where he goes."

"All right, Marse Hillyer," and, leaving his truck, the negro hastened out at the side door of the building and sped up the street. Hillyer went back into the office and sat down at his private desk. Once he lowered his head to his crossed arms and it looked as if he were praying. In a few minutes Jake returned, swinging his slouch hat in his hand.

"Well," gasped Hillyer—"well?"

"He went first to de postoffice, Marse Hillyer, but he didn't put no letter in an' wait to git any. It looked to me like he didn't know what he was goin' to do. Den he come on down by Hillyer's bar. He stopped dar an' looked in, den he come on slow like an' walked back an' vent in. I went round to de back end an' watched. He was at de counter pourin' him out a dram, Marse Hillyer."

"You say he was, Jake?" said the merchant. "Jake, in the mornin' I want you to truck all that western wheat over on the other side. It's too damp where it is."

"All right, Marse Hillyer."

A moment after the negro had left the office George Buckley came in and resumed his seat at the counter. He opened the big ledger, dipped his pen and began to write. Hillyer watched him cautiously. His hand seemed steady enough, but his cheeks were flushed and his hair disheveled over his brow. Just then Mrs. Buckley came into the office. She took off her bonnet, showing smooth, gray hair and a deeply wrinkled brow and cheeks, and stood for a moment behind her son. Hillyer fancied that their conversation might be of a private nature, and, taking up a grain sampler, he left the room. The sound of his heavy boots drew George Buckley's attention, and looking round he saw his mother. Her sympathetic eyes fell beneath his wild glance.

"He's in a awful state of mind," Mrs. Buckley.

"I reckon Mr. Hillyer's already told you," she began.

"Yes, he's told me."

"Well, that ain't but one thing fer sensible folks to do," faltered the woman, "an' that's to make the best of it an' go on tryin' to do our own duty."

"Yes," he nodded vacantly, "you are right, mother. Are you going home tonight?"

"No. I lowed it ud look more respectful to stay till they tuck 'im off in the mornin'. The sheriff's wife axed me to spend the night with her in the jail house, so I could be nigh 'im."

George Buckley shuddered visibly, but he said nothing. It gave Mrs. Buckley the opportunity she was looking for.

"George, I reckon bein' young as you are an'—an' mixin' with folks here in Darby that hain't never been in such a mess, it goes harder with you than it does with me, away out thar in the mountains, but I wish you wouldn't take it so hard. You can't help yore pa's doin's. No, you can't, an' no right minded folks n't a-goin' to blame you. As fer me"—she paused an instant as she began to roll her sunbonnet in her fat, red hands—"why, my boy, I feel just like a awful load was tuck off me. I can't help it. It may not be human—I don't know—but I feel just that a-way. You think yore cross is hard to bear, but fer fifteen year I've hardly slept a sound night's sleep, expectin' an' expectin' the officers of the law to ride up an' holler at the fence. An' kep' his secrets—law, that's the worst of it, fer he would tell me every blessed bit of devilment he ever was in. It all began way back fifteen year ago, when he fell off his wagon an' struck his head agin a rock. He never got over that; it made 'im as ill as a snake an' mad at everybody, even his best friends. George, I want to tell you how he did once when—"

"Don't, don't, don't!" the young man cried. "I know enough. I don't want you ever to speak to me of his crimes."

"Well, I won't, then," promised the woman. "I reckon I've heard so much of his doin's that it don't horrify me as much as it would you. Well, I'll go on back. I'm goin' to Webber & Land's an' buy him a change of underclothes an' some socks."

When she had reached the big entrance of the warehouse she saw Hillyer in the center of the building, walking back and forth, his gray head hanging low, as if in troubled meditation. Turning as if from a sudden impulse, she went and joined him. The two faced each other.

"I smelt liquor on 'im," she said tersely. "I stood back to 'im; he's had 'im a dram, Mr. Hillyer."

"Yes, he's had a drink or two, Mrs. Buckley."

"What'd he git his whiskey?"

"Jake followed 'im an' seed 'im at Hillyer's bar. I hain't said a word about it. It don't do one bit of good to preach to a man all upset in mind, an' half full at that."

"No, you're plumb right, an' nobody kin drive George. I'm powerfully afraid this is goin' to be his downward start, Mr. Hillyer."

"Don't say that!" The words were spoken almost in a groan, and the merchant's sympathetic face seemed wrung with inward pain. "Don't say that," he repeated, under his breath. "We mustn't lose hope—we mustn't do that!"

The old woman stared at the working face for a moment in silence; then she asked abruptly, "Mr. Hillyer, who is that family o' Cranstons that's come here from Virginia?"

"Oh, you've heard o' them?" said Hillyer, taking a breath. "Major Cranston's a member of a fine-old family, a regular F. F. V.; he owns six or seven farms in this county an' has a lot o' investments all over the country. He moved here about six months ago bec' the climate agrees with 'im, an' he hain't very strong. George got acquainted with his daughter, a pretty, likely gal, but his proud as a queen, an' they've been good friends ever since. She's well educated, an' so's he, an' they get along powerful well together. Have you ever seed 'er, Mrs. Buckley?"

"Yes, once," answered the woman. "I never shall forget it, fer it showed me the plainer what a fine character George has than anything he ever done. Thar's a lot o' middlin' folks out at the Cove, Mr. Hillyer, an' the report got out that since George got his schoolin' an' you tuck 'im in with you that he was ashamed o' me. They kept this talk up, an' when he got to goin' here an' you with Lydia Cranston it got worse, an' some o' 'em lowed that the girl didn't know what sort o' scrub kin George had. This got to George somehow, an' one day when I was at Grove Level camp ground with some of my neighbors, George fetched 'er out along with some other couples of town folks. An' when he seed me a-settin' in front o' Mrs. Fellows' tent with some more women he fetched the gal right up to me. He was sorter pale an' excited, but he reached down an' tuck my hand an' lifted me up, an' says he, 'Miss Cranston, I want you to make the acquaintance of my mother—no, that wasn't it exactly. This was it, 'Miss Cranston, I want you to meet my mother, an' me 'n' her shook hands. It was awful, Mr. Hillyer. I've got a little more sense 'n a Jay bird, an' I seed through it. I seed, moreover, that while she was a perfect lady, she was sorter set back. She got red in the face an' was all flustered in what she said, but he stopped that talk; our way an' showed what he was."

"Yes, he's all right, Mrs. Buckley."

"Maybe," ventured the old woman tentatively, "maybe he's in love with that gal, Mr. Hillyer, an' knows she hain't the sort—that her folks hain't the sort—to overlook a—a—"

"That's just it, Mrs. Buckley," said the merchant with firmness, "an' that accounts for his misery an' the whistling. This thing has hit 'im away below the belt. Thar's no two ways about it. I'm dand afraid it's goin' to make all that's been done."

The old woman raised her eyes to the troubled face before her and stared steadily. "Let's hope not," she said. "Shorely the Lord will show us some way to—avoid that."

Hillyer dropped his eyes, and, turning toward the door, the old woman slowly shuffled out.

HEALTHY PLANTS Require the Most Careful Attention as Well as Good Soil.

Did you ever see a rosebush which—despite the most favorable environment of soil and sunshine—and of atmosphere, seemed never to achieve a healthy growth?

A ton of manure will not help a plant that has a cancer eating out its heart. You must destroy the cause before you can remove the effect.

Your garden is full of Dantruff and Baldpate, and you are rubbing on hair lotions, and rubbing in vasoline, etc.

You must look to the cause of the trouble—it's a germ at the roots of your plant which causes it to fall out. Newbrow's Herpicide destroys the germ, and the hair is the sure result.

Sold by leading druggists. Send the stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Art Development...

Is Very Marked. A A

The love for art in all things is developing. This is particularly noticeable in printing matter.

We find that the very people who ten years or more ago were satisfied with any dabby, smeary, tarry kind of printed matter—anything—the ugliest types, the worst conglomeration of arrangement, so long as it was black on white paper, are the best judges and the most particular people today. You know differently now—we do anyway.

It is a question of harmony of Color, Typography and Paper that stamp approval on your Printed Matter.

Whether a card, letter head, hand-bill, folder, booklet, or catalogue, the artistic sense has been educated to demand that which is tasteful.

We all develop with the times, if we are progressive.

The Printing Department of The Gazette is Progressive.

It has developed and is growing more and more with the advance of the printer's art. We cleaned out long ago the ugly types; threw out old ideas; brought together material, machinery and men of advanced ideas and tastes into one union of harmony.

The simple piece of type execution receives the care that satisfies the man of artistic tastes, the same as the intricate two and three color runs.

Proof of good work in the samples of printed matter of every description which are here to see. We guarantee the same grade of work which comes from the best establishments any where and at the same time save some of the expenditure to you. We want to figure on any and all classes of printing and can assure you of an interesting estimate.

WARSHIPS FORCE TURKEY TO YIELD AMERICAN DEMANDS ARE MADE

Mr. Leishman Had Difficulty in Securing an Audience With the Sultan Until the Arrival of the Vessels in Turkish Waters.

Washington, July 21.—In view of the fact that the American government is pressing its demand on Turkey that discrimination against American interests in the Turkish empire shall cease the diplomatic correspondence in the current volume of foreign relations is timely. It discloses the persistence with which Mr. Leishman, the American minister to Turkey, has acted and the extreme difficulties he has encountered in his efforts to negotiate with the sultan.

In the original instructions sent him by the state department, directing him to bring to the attention of the sultan the existing embarrassment to American educational and religious institutions in Turkey, Mr. Leishman was informed that the president was deeply in earnest in the matter, and while instructed to approach the sultan in the spirit of utmost friendship he was advised to impress on the sultan the fixed desire and expectation of the president that this country and its citizens be treated the same as the most favored nation.

Awakes to America's Power.
In one of his communications to the state department Mr. Leishman expressed the belief that the Ottoman government gradually was awakening to the fact that this is a great and powerful country—slow to take offense, but capable of enforcing its just demands.

Mr. Leishman's first trouble resulted from his efforts to secure a personal audience with the sultan. Several weeks having elapsed after Mr. Leishman's demand for an audience had been made, Secretary Hay, in a note to the minister, said he had impressively informed the Turkish minister of the displeasure and amazement of the president at the manner in which his minister's request for an audience with the sultan had been treated.

A week later Mr. Leishman had an audience with the sultan.

Ventures Toward Threat.
In another dispatch Mr. Leishman said existing conditions had ceased to furnish an excuse for prolonged delay in settling pending questions and that he had somewhat strained his instructions and had ventured pretty close to a threat that unless the matters were settled without further delay something unpleasant might happen. Later he informed the department that the sultan had taken a strong stand against complying with the demands of this government relative to schools, resting under the impression that no forcible measures could be taken without congressional action.

Warships Command Respect.
It also is disclosed that pending the arrival of the American squadron at Beyroot, when one American consul was mobbed, Mr. Leishman said the sublime porte appeared to treat the expected arrival of the American warships as a friendly visit. Later the state department advised Mr. Leishman that the Turkish minister had informed the secretary of state that the Turkish government considered the presence of the American squadron in Turkish waters a cause of excitement and asked its withdrawal, and that the Turkish minister was informed that the state department did not share that view; that its representations had not received the friendly attention it had a right to expect and that compliance with the request for withdrawal would have an unfortunate effect on the relations of the two countries.

"Pittsburg Coming Fast"

So Says Captain-Manager
Fred Clarke of the National Champions.
Timely Talk of the Game.
Joe Corbett, Etc.

"There never was a time since the season opened," said Manager Fred Clarke of the Pittsburg Pirates, "even during the dark days when we were losing almost every game that we played, that I felt that the Pittsburg team would not be a factor in the championship race. Of course I felt bad when we were losing, but this did not drive away my appetite nor make me lie awake at night trying to good as ever, and his work shows that he knows what he is talking about. "These men are pitchers upon whom we can depend absolutely. Then we have one or two others who will do in emergencies. The rest of our team is as strong as it was last season, so there is no fear on our part that we will not be in the hunt for the pennant in a very short time. We are coming fast."

While baseball writers and the press in general have practically ignored agitation for or against the foul strike rule since its continuation was finally decided upon last winter, the baseball public does not seem inclined to let the subject rest in peace.

Recently many letters have been written to club owners and newspapers throughout the country protesting against the dearth of the old time free hitting games and the consequent lack of interest for the lovers of that class of diamond contests. Many of these place the blame on the foul strike rule and ask for its repeal.

The dean of all baseball writers, Henry Chadwick, in a recent letter for publication, expresses the unqualified opinion that this will be the last year of the foul strike rule, as it has already been discarded by most of the organizations in the east which are an armed Russian guard blocked the gateway, preventing communication with the men. The Malacca is declared to have on board no contraband articles for Japan. The cargo of 3,000 tons includes forty tons of explosive supplies for Hongkong.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—Sir Charles Hardinge, the British ambassador to Russia, in behalf of his government, presented a strong protest to Russia against the seizure in the Red sea and detention of the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Malacca, which was carrying 300 tons of British government stores for the naval establishment at Hongkong, each case of which was marked with the broad arrow, which is the government stamp. The ambassador also presented a general protest against the action of the Russian volunteer fleet steamers in the Red sea.

Vessel Leaves Port Said, July 21.—The seized Peninsular and Oriental liner Malacca sailed from here today for Cherbourg, en route to Liban, Russia, in charge of the Russian crew.

London, July 21.—The cabinet met this afternoon to consider the incidents in connection with the seizure of the Malacca.

Report Advance St. Petersburg, July 21.—It is rumored a Russian reconnaissance in force in the direction of Matorinski Pass has been disastrously defeated by the Japanese. The Russian losses are reported as very heavy.

Correction Made London, July 21.—The Lloyd's this afternoon corrected the announcement the steamer Packling was seized by the Russians. The correspondent at Perm cabled the vessel passed there all right. It is believed it was only stopped to examine her papers and search for contraband and then released.

Release Vessel St. Petersburg, July 21.—It is reported here the government has ordered the release of the steamer Malacca should a search of the cargo show "no contraband of war on board."

Seizure of Ship Rouses Britain London, July 21.—Russia's action in seizing British vessels in the Red sea has roused a remarkably hostile feeling among all classes of the people, and a bitterness of feeling toward the Russians is manifested on all sides that is without precedent since the Crimean war. The acts of the czar's volunteer ships are generally considered piratical, and retaliation is strongly urged even by the most conservative.

That this vengeful feeling in the mind of the British public spells war with Russia, unless the czar backs down, is now the fear of the commanders of the ship of state.

Even the most conservative who have been in the service of the government for many years, and who openly deplored the haste with which they thought Great Britain had plunged into the Transvaal war, frankly declare for a policy of reprisal against what is regarded here as Russia's violation of treaties, and her piratical attack on British commerce.

British Arc Aroused. The warlike tone of such papers as the Times, the Standard, the Morning Post, and the Daily Telegraph, which in national crises hitherto almost invariably advised caution, has had its inevitable effect. There has been stirred up a storm of indignation among all classes in the United Kingdom, and the strength of which the government itself can scarcely gauge.

Those who deplored the outbreak of the war between Japan and Russia and insisted publicly and privately that Great Britain, crippled financially, after her South African experiences, must not, at all costs, be drawn into the far Eastern struggle, are now among the most outspoken champions of a physical force that will prevent the repetition of the Malacca incident in the Red sea.

Those few officials at the foreign office who are in full possession of all the details of Great Britain's desire to arrive at an entente with Russia, are in despair. They realize that the policy so carefully fostered by King Edward and Foreign Minister Lansdowne would now be indignantly repudiated by all parties in the House of Commons, and involve with the public the downfall of any ministry advocating it.

Embarrasses Lord Lansdowne. Lord Lansdowne's policy since the first whisper of war between Japan and Russia reached Downing street has been one of consistent neutrality. When the outbreak came it was a matter for no little consternation, as frequently pointed out in these dispatches, that Great Britain had kept herself free from all entanglements, thanks chiefly to the hurrying on of the Anglo-French entente, on the strength of which the diplomats of both nations concerned believed they would be able to be detached spectators of the struggle in the far east.

The unlooked for developments in the Dardanelles and the Red sea embarrass Lord Lansdowne more than the circumstances themselves would indicate. The government, weakened by internal dissensions, could scarcely stand for a day against a popular demand for reprisals against Russia, and this very danger is being assiduously fostered by leading government newspapers.

Matter May Be Adjusted. The news that there may be an amicable adjustment of the difficulties as the result of an interview between Emperor Nicholas and Count Lamoriniere given in a dispatch from St. Petersburg is not yet known to the British public and press. If such an adjustment eventuates it will let Premier Balfour's government out of one of the most awkward and most serious crises it has had to face in its checkered career, but it will undoubtedly be several months before the British public can forget what has been described as the most humiliating incident in British history since the Dutch victoriously entered the Thames.

HORSE THIEVES ARE BANDED

Indiana and Michigan Sheriffs Unite to Capture a Gang.

La Porte, Ind., July 21.—A movement has been started to organize the sheriffs of northern Indiana and southern Michigan counties for protection against the operations of horse thieves. The bold operations in the two states has led to the belief that an organized band of horse thieves exists with special means of disposing of stolen horses. Stations are believed to be located at intervals of about forty miles between the headquarters of the gang and Chicago.

Roman Catholic Women Meet.

St. Paul, Minn., July 21.—More than 800 women, representing the various branches of the Ladies' Roman Catholic Benevolent Association of the United States, are in St. Paul for the eighth annual national convention of the association.

CHICAGO JEWS IN A SERIOUS RIOT

Attack Two Dog Catchers And Then They Attack The Police.

(Special by Scripps-McIntire.) Chicago, Ill., July 21.—A riot in the ghetto district this morning resulted in an attack by a mob on two dog catchers who were severely beaten. When the police arrived they were attacked by the mob. Patrolman Lillias' skull was fractured by a brick. He may die. The police fired on the mob, wounding Isaac Cohn and Wolf Kalford seriously, and a number of others. The mob scattered. Many arrests were made.

Americans Win Bowling Match.

Berlin, July 21.—The German-American bowling tournament at Solingen was won by the Americans, with a score of 3,498 to 3,451. Schwartz of New York made the highest and Rothmeyer of New York made the second highest score.

Stray Bullet Kills Bystander.

Parkersburg, Va., July 21.—Frank McCabe was shot and killed by Jack Carlin, a negro, who was arrested. McCabe was in front of a hotel when two negroes were fighting and he was hit by a stray bullet.

Confuse the Demons.

The Chinese are convinced that the plague is the work of demons. One way of getting even with them is to advance the date of New Year by several days. This, they aver, confuses the demons, and when they find out how they have been fooled they are ashamed and blink away with their plague.

French Custom a Good One.

In France, when a funeral passes, every man raises his hat to salute it. The deceased person may have been a child, a pauper, a beggar; it is no matter; the cortege is saluted by every man, whether he be prince, millionaire or mendicant. It is a good and lovely custom.

Injure French Wine Market.

A French wine merchant in London complains that "Italy, with its Chianti; Spain, with its Rioja; Germany, with its Rhine wines, and, above all, Australia and California, with their imitation Bordeaux and Burgundy, have materially injured the market of France."

Beautiful Asiatic Lake.

In central Asia, near the Caspian sea, is a lake of beautiful rose color, while the banks are covered with salt crystals as white as snow. From the waters of this lake there arises a flowerlike odor. The color and the odor are supposed to be caused by vegetable matter in the depths.

MISSOURI DEMOCRATS IN ALL-NIGHT SESSION

Committee Report Is Made After Two Days' Fight—Anti-Folk Delegates Are Seated.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 21.—The Democratic state convention received and adopted the report of its credentials committee at 11 o'clock last night, and then effected a permanent organization by electing Judge W. W. Graves of Butler chairman and continuing the temporary officers in the other places.

The convention spent the day waiting for the credentials report, the committee having been in session almost continually since the night before. The main fight was over the St. Louis delegates, which was settled by seating the Hawes delegates except in the Twenty-eighth ward, where the Folk delegates were admitted.

When the convention met at 11 o'clock last night many delegates were unable to get seats, their places being occupied by outsiders. The greatest disorder prevailed, and it was only after the sergeant-at-arms had cleared the floor and seated the delegates that order was finally restored and the convention allowed to proceed to business.

The platform, which was adopted at 2:30 o'clock this morning, contains a strong anti-boodle plank as its principal feature. It declares that "the paramount issue before the people of Missouri is the eradication of bribery from public life in this state."

REFUSE TO WORK WITH NEGRO

Washington Bricklayers Object to a Civil Service Appointee.

Washington, July 21.—Twenty-eight bricklayers engaged in construction work at the Washington army barracks are on strike because a non-union colored bricklayer was given work there. The local bricklayers' union, after a stormy session, decided to give its support to the strikers until the negro is relieved of his position. The negro obtained his job by means of a civil service examination.

and the key to the mystery of our non-success.

"I felt all the time that the material for a winning team was at hand and that any day might see the turning point in our losing streak. Well, it came finally, and from now on it will be a case of climbing up in the race until we reach a position that our strength as a team entitles us to. Instead of being weaker than last season, as has been generally supposed, we are stronger in the box than we were at this time last year.

"Phillips and Leever have rounded to in their form and now are giving us not controlled by the national agreement.

Arguments for or against the retention of the foul strike can be repeated by the column without raising a point not already argued to death, but the fact remains that there is need of some legislation to overcome the handicap which the pitcher has over the batter in the games of the present day. This is on the assumption that the baseball promoters do not care to estrange the great mass of supporters who revel in the old fashioned double score games and enter only to those who enjoy nothing except a "no-hit-no-run" game.

Each year finds the pitcher assuming greater mastery, and the records of the present baseball season furnish some food for reflection. Up to the middle of the season of 1903 there had been fifty-four shutout games in the American and National leagues. For the same period this year there have been sixty-five white-washes in the same leagues, an increase of over 20 per cent in the pitching supremacy. Previous to the middle of last season no pitcher had shut a team out without a hit; this year there was one such game.

Last year there were three one hit games pitched before the middle of the season; this year there were five.

Last year in the same time there were eight two hit games; this year there have been sixteen of them. These are eloquent facts.

Pitcher Joe Corbett is now back in the game after several years of absence.

Joe is a brother of Jim Corbett, the famous heavy weight fighter, and at one time he bade fair to equal on the diamond his brother's prominence in the ring.

Joe is with the St. Louis Nationals, which are under the management of Kid Nichols, the former Boston pitcher. He is twirling almost as well as he ever did and as the season progresses will improve.
